4. TRAINING COURSE RECOGNITION

4.1 General industrial training

A number of courses designed to provide newcomers to the industry with basic skills and knowledge are available through normal commercial training providers.

Although not pre-requisites for PCCP accreditation, these courses are acknowledged as useful in developing a strong skills and experience base which in turn will lift the quality perceptions of the industry as a whole.

Examples of courses and accreditations are Certificate level (III or IV) courses in blast cleaning and painting and accreditations under the SSPC programs administered by the Australasian Corrosion Association eg C7 (Dry Abrasive Blasting), C12 (Airless Spray Basics).

4.2 Training for protective coatings category

Specialist training in the Category of Protective Coatings, preparation and application is required for PCCP accreditation.

Requirements for acceptable courses are detailed in the documents listed above. The courses listed below have been assessed and found to satisfy the requirements.

Note: PCCP does not get involved with the provision of training as such. Contractors and others wishing to avail themselves of the Recognised training services should contact the training provider(s) directly via the contact methods detailed below.

4.3 Training in other Categories

At present, PCCP have not developed criteria for recognition of courses for either pavement marking or commercial and residential building painting training.
